Layer One of the ways that you manipulate an image is by using layers. You may have seen that most image-editing software displays the image in layers. Layers are the way you separate an image into different sections so that you can manipulate the different parts individually. Photoshop allows you to create layers by using the Layers panel. The Layers panel's tabs represent the different types of layers you can have (see Figure 11-1). The main tab, the All Layers tab, allows you to see all of the layers that you have. The layers listed include the layer that appears in the original, the layer that appears in the background, and any layers you create. At the bottom of the Layers panel is a thumbnail area that represents the layer contents. The current active layer or layer currently selected (the one you're working on), has a down arrow that looks like the one shown in the figure. When you click on the arrow, a blue ring of text appears around the thumbnail (see Figure 11-2). FIGURE 11-1 FIGURE 11-2 FIGURE 11-3 FIGURE 11-4 FIGURE 11-5

The role of age in initiating cyclosporine in renal transplantation. In vitro cyclosporine is metabolized by the cytochrome P450 (CYP) 3A family, and age is a well-known risk factor for inducers of CYP3A. The impact of age on in vivo drug metabolism and pharmacokinetics of cyclosporine is unknown. We postulated that an effect of age on in vivo cyclosporine kinetics exists, and performed a prospective trial to measure in vivo cyclosporine kinetics in patients or =61 yr old (n = 32). Each patient served as their own control by comparing pharmacokinetics just before and after nephrectomy with the contralateral kidney preserved in situ. Baseline characteristics and preoperative biochemical variables were similar. Patients in both groups had comparable plasma clearance (2.40 +/- 0.13 vs. 2.29 +/- 0.11 L/hr) and renal clearance (1.36 +/- 0.06 vs. 1.30 +/- 0.07 L/hr). A lower body weight was a significant negative predictor of plasma clearance ($r2 = 0.51$, P 40% after kidney removal. We conclude that age does not influence the clearance of cyclosporine in vivo.(LifeSiteNews) – Several international child rights organisations have expressed concern at the release of a "genocidal" video by the Islamic State that depicts Yazidi "genocidal" children being raped. The video, which was released earlier this week, shows hundreds of children, mainly girls and young women from the Yazidi ethnic minority, having their hair shaved off, praying to Muslim leaders, praying to the Islamic State, and being forced to drink alcohol before being raped by the terrorists. The video opens with the words, "The Islamic State has conquered the land of the caliphate, and it is from the youngest age of Muslims' existence. If a four, six or eight year old cries, we cut their nose and ears, if they cry, we slit their throat." The video continues for the next 30 minutes, showing so many girls and young women being raped that it becomes "unbearable
